5 HOUSE POINTS FOR EVERY CONTRIBUTION THAT GETS PUBLISHED!

SPOT THE TEACHER

Noah and Louis Conway have sent in some lovely work.

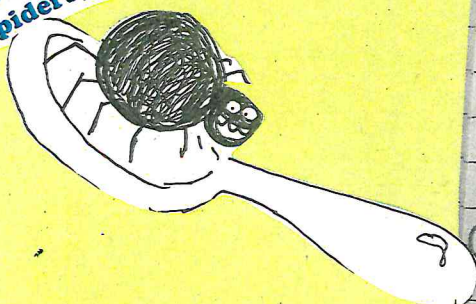

However, as they haven't said who done what, we'll open it up as a competition.

5 Houses Points to whoever gets the right answer:

Email: WHO DONE WHAT with the correct answer to littledeer@hartsbourne.org.

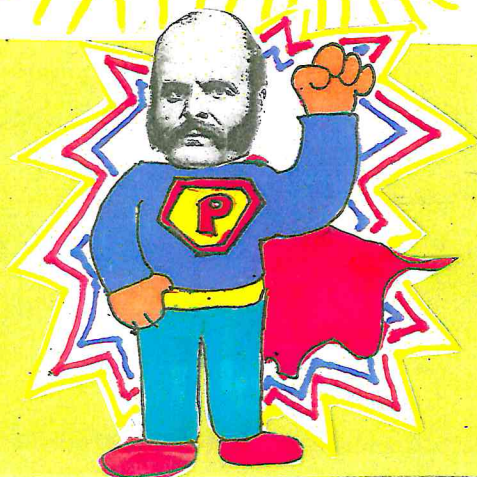

In the course of an average lifetime, while sleeping you might eat around 70 assorted insects and 10 spiders, or more.

I walked across an attractive island and after after 1 hour I had a little done. The fresh air & the dazzling beach was heading into my nostrils. The island was as glamorous as a guardian angel. The fancy ^{Palm} trees were giving me a lovely shade from the burning sun. The clear sky was as pretty as an ocean summer breeze. The sand was so hot I couldn't even walk on it. As soon as my feet dipped in the clear water I sat down for a minute or two. The seagulls chirping while I have a nap.

CAPTAIN PHENOMENAL VS THE ELECTRIC STAPLER

It was a fine morning in Goatopolis the city of the goats. The goats were going about their everyday business, shopping, working, driving cars headbutting trolls over bridges and down deep ravines, when suddenly, nothing happened. But it happened suddenly. And then something did happen. Something bad!

All the goats stopped dead in their tracks as their hideous metallic sound rent the air. The sky went dark, and a shadow covered the city. It was a mighty spaceship, a silver spaceship in the shape of a paper clip. Huge gasps went up from the goats. They knew that this was it, an invasion. An invasion of Goatopolis from the most evil of evil villains. It was THE ELECTRIC STAPLER.

The Electric Stapler had been the manager of the stationary shop who had gone quite insane when his stationary shop had rolled off a cliff – and therefore wasn't stationary anymore. He had fashioned himself a magic suit out of discarded staples, which for some reason best known to himself he had electrified, for no apparent purpose.

The goats of Goatopolis were in fear, they know that The Electric Stapler had a single plan for all people he met... To turn them into cheap and extra sticky Post-it Notes.

Lord Rammy-Ram-Ram, the mayor of Goatopolis rushed to the nearest postbox, he had written an urgent letter for immediate help, and posted it using a First Class Stamp!

Two days later while drinking a glass of dandelion and burdock, Captain Phenomenal, the greatest superhero of Bushey and South Oxhey received a post card:

Dear Captain Phenomenal,

Having a lovely time in Goatopolis wish you were here, especially as we have been invaded by The Electric Stapler.

Lord Rammy-Ram-Ram

Mayor of Goatopolis

My lockdown experience

Selene Frouel - Yr 6

21/04/2021

1. For me lockdown was a difficult experience because I couldn't see my friends.
2. I couldn't even go to London or Watchfield and it made me feel really sad.
3. I couldn't go to France to see my family or go to Italy for see my brother godfather and godmother.
4. I was ok with staying at home to play board games, have more freetime, play video games and have more time to go on the trampoline with my brother because with school time and homework I couldn't have time to play on the trampoline with him.
5. But the best thing about this lockdown is that I could at least be happy for our planet to take back what she had before humans arrived and destroy it with all of these factories, plastic bottles and other pollution things, and the animals could have their habitat for a long time before humans destroy them.
